

flutter of the sky

a soft breeze

whispers

in my imagination,

and i turn

my head, pressing

my ear against it.

as Ione said,

the dream of reality and the reality of the dream.

and i'm falling deep into the expanse of feeling-finding, searching for a source that does not exist. then i'm submerged in a cacophony of dynamics, and it's through, up, and back around, listening. fully composed, waiting for the space in which my listening affects the sounding. symbiosis, symmetry, synthesis, and i'm neck-deep in a warm bath of writing-reading, and my ear tells the breeze what it has longed to hear.
